

CONFIDENCE. COMPASSION. CONVICTION.

For Kelli Anne Vioria, Esq., these are not ideals, but rather the foundational principles that guide her every interaction.

After 16 years practicing law — 14 of which were spent prosecuting criminal domestic violence and major felonies — Vioria is channeling her vast courtroom experience and fine-tuning her focus: She is now dedicated to helping families negotiate matters of family law, including divorce, child custody and support, post-divorce decree issues, protective orders, paternity, adoption and guardianships.

"I am approachable on one hand and a fierce advocate on the other," Vioria says. "My job is to provide my clients with the information they need to make good legal and personal decisions. With my courtroom skills and years of experience working with families in crisis, I have a unique ability to help clients navigate the family system."

Vioria says her job is to educate clients about the family court process, managing expectations about likely outcomes and providing legal counsel to help them make the best decisions that allow them to transition to the next phases of their lives.

"I have a strong background in dealing with families in crisis and in helping those families find peace," she says. "I see that as the most important aspect of my job: I help my clients find strength and relief after going through whatever has led them to family court."

"At some point, we all are faced with bad things that happen and our lives spiral out of control. My goal is to help my clients take that control back."

Kelli Anne Vioria — an attorney who will inspire confidence, show compassion and represent you with the utmost conviction.
